AASP-MN Executive Director Search Update

Following May's announcement of AASP-MN Executive Director, Judell Anderson's retirement, the association has provided an update on the search for her successor.

AASP-MN President Tom Archambault is leading a Search Committee consisting of 3 current board members and 3 past presidents. The Committee will be spearheading the process of evaluating candidates and making a hiring recommendation to the Board of Directors.

The Committee has retained the services of Cincinnatus, a Minneapolis-based consulting firm serving nonprofits and membership organizations. Cincinnatus provides an array of services, including executive search and transition support, governance best practices, strategic planning, fund development and executive counsel. Cincinnatus has spent time with Judell and the Search Committee to learn more about the association's current state, aspirations for the future and the critical skillsets needed in its next executive director. A position announcement has been developed based on this information and can be found at cincinnatus.com/job-opportunities. Applications will be accepted until August 31, 2021.

Moving forward, the Search Committee will be working closely with Cincinnatus to develop a slate of potential candidates and work through the different phases of the search process. The newly-selected executive director will likely be introduced in November.

Archambault stated, "We are incredibly fortunate that the Alliance is in the outstanding position it is. Our next leader will be stepping into a very strong organization, thanks to Judell and her dedicated staff."
